Your Comments: The EPA's proposed clean-up plan for the Portland Harbor Superfund Site is far too minimal and passive to restore the heavily polluted Willamette River! I am astonished, frankly, that the measures outlined would be considered by the agency to be adequate. I haven't followed the history of other Superfund clean-up sites -- perhaps the typical pattern is that the EPA proposes minimal steps and waits to see if those will be accepted without outcry. We need more aggressive, effective action to clean up the Willamette

-- please fulfill the agency's mission to PROTECT HUMAN HEALTH AND THE ENVIRONMENT. Thank you.
